Disclaimer

There are a few things to note off before reading this document that I believe are important to keep in mind whilst reading:

1. As I am currently in the hospital, one of the conditions that allows me to have access to a computer is the restriction of internet access. I have some screenshots in the document, as I was working on this document before my admission. I have not been able to access Discord to take more. I will type out (*), followed by the evidence I would have shared for these instances where I cannot provide any.
    - The only exception is a transcript of my entire conversation with Ren on Twitter which has been made by a family member.
    - You can find it here. 18+ warning.

2. Because of the above, I am also not able to stay up to date. All information that I will be addressing is information only up to April 9th. Any information that Ren might have disclosed after this point is unknown to me, and thus, I will be unable to answer. Information provided may be outdated should you cross reference information that I am referencing, compared to what may currently be written.

3. For the disclaimer and the timeline I have had help from my parents to structure and clarify my main points. I wanted to make sure that my main points are clear for all to understand. For that, I have needed help and the language used may be a bit more formal than my usual style of writing. My full response is more free-flowing in a less formal language and you should bear with me for typos and any timeline that is not fully chronological.

4. Ren is genderfluid. Over the years I have referred to Ren as both he/him, she/her and they/them. This is apparent in the different screenshots. In our private conversations I was told to use she/her and I will do so in this document.
